

Outdoor education in a variety of guises has a rich history in Aotearoa New Zealand, dating back more than 100 years.

Outdoor learning experiences have a strong and often much-loved place in our collective education memories.

However, the world in which we currently live is vastly different from the one which shaped those memories. What does that mean for education, and more specifically, what does that mean for outdoor learning experiences? This book attends to these questions from a forward looking position by providing a practical, insightful, and innovative reappraisal of outdoor education theory and practice. Embracing a critical socio-ecological perspective, the contributors celebrate aspects of creative practice and chart a direction for outdoor education which aspires to educate for a sustainable and more equitable future.
